A Poverty Stricken Man in Lacks. It was during the war that a well known business man of this city lept goselp going, and his money, too, in the whirf and excitement of a fast life. He had large army contracts, and from them bis resembled came. The money, easily obtained, was in truth thrown kway. He had barrels of it: satimates as to his means were not infrequently placed at $2,000,000 or $3,000,000; he had all the attributes of a prodigal—in fast horses, fast women, an unquenchable thirst for wines, and the desire to be talked about as a man about town. He was as generous as he was reckless, and fair-weather friends swarmed about him. They helped themselves to his funds and sang his glories at long as he had a dollar to apend. In the height of his fally he thought of what was to come, the inevitable death. What men said about him living paffed up his vasity, but what they would my about him dead must depend upon the aplender with which he could go out of the world. Over his glave he wanted to have the fair-weather friends swarmed about him most imposing monument in Spring Grove. "Wind," says an old horseman, "Is the lungs will nover a multisude of faults, while, on the other hand, perfection of shape and form are uselss when the wind is out. The cheat, therefore, in all cases, should be large and espacious. In shape it may vary somewhat according to the service to which the horse is to be put. If he is apt to be kept for slow work and heavy drawing, the cheat may be nearly circular in ferm, because this shape is one for arrength and bulk, this shape is one for strength and bulk, to receive and bear up against the pressure of the collar, while, at the same time, sufficient room is secured for that expansion of the lungs caused by slow, regular work But, if the chest is circular, let it be at the same time deep, or else the lungs may be cramped. A horse with a shallow chest is worthless for any purpose. The rule, then, is this: Hor a draught horse, a circular but deep chest, but, as you pass through the different degrees of speed up to the racer and trotter, the chest will increase in depth, trotter, the chest will increase in depth, Now in the sixth Year of its existence, long ago compared to be an anti-minute, and has come to be regarded as highest rate of speed, 'you what take a chest as deep as a greyhound, and at the same time not lacking in strength."
